
Project To Eliminate Two Railroad Crossings In Town Of Pamplin

underpass, it feels, will add both a much safer and more convenient facility than exists now.

In addition to crossing the Norfolk and Western Railway's main line tracks, VA 47 also crosses the beltline tracks. This latter crossing gives access to the Releo Company's woodyard which is situated in the fork between the two sets of tracks.

Officials of the Releo Company requested that the crossing of the beltline tracks remain as it is now so that access to the woodyard could be continued.

Engineers of the Department of Highways, with the commission concurring, said the Highway Department has no objection to Releo's working out an agreement with the N & W to let the crossing remain as a private crossing.

However, the Highway Department will not be involved in the agreement and the crossing will not be in the state's system of highways; therefore, the department will not be responsible for its maintenance.

It was pointed out by the Commission that this entire project was predicated on the fact that the railroad crossings in Pamplin should be closed as a safety measure. It was these features of the project that were approved by the Commission.
